Artemas Ward's entertainment opened for the door, unable to procure even standing room. The extertainment thoroughly justified public expectation. Is pectation. We do not remember ever to have heard the pictorial exhibitions. Every phrase appeared to his the mark with operring precision. There was com paratively little of the peculiar sort of humor which die tinguishes Artemus Ward's writings, but a vast deal of the quick, keen and pointed jocularity which appeals most strongly to the mirihful sense of a popular assem. blage. As a writer and as a lecturer, Artemus Ward like "any other man," must necessarily be two different beings. It is certain, however, if we may judge by the result of Monday evening's experiment, that his ability is not less in one capacity than in the other.

The record of a tour among the Mormons forms the anhatantial part of the entertainment at Dodworth's Hall, and the relation of personal experience and older observation in that strange region affords much matter of serious interest and instruction. But to countered any suspicion of tediousness that might ereep over his audience, the lecturer has enlivened the whole subject by drawing liberally upon such humorous elements as it obviously possesses. The union of practicel informa-tion with odd and mirthful funcies, is very skillfully contrived. The illustrative part of the exhibition mate fower demands upon the merriment of the andieses
